

Marmen Énergie celebrates its 10-year anniversary

Matane (Quebec), September 28, 2015 - Marmen Énergie celebrates its 10 years of operation this year. Marmen Énergie is a subsidiary of Marmen, whose head office is located in Trois-Rivières. Marmen is recognized as one of North America's largest manufacturers of wind towers.

Marmen has always believed in the importance of renewable resources in the energy landscape and remains firmly committed to continuing its development. Marmen began operations in this sector in 2002 with the construction of plants designed specifically for the manufacture of towers in Trois-Rivières, followed by the inauguration in 2005 of Marmen Énergie in Matane. In 2013, it continued its expansion with the opening of its first facility on American soil, in South Dakota.

Since its inception in 2005, Marmen Énergie ranks first and is recognized as the largest manufacturer of wind towers in Gaspésie. From the beginning, the company has demonstrated a strong and consistent commitment and has made every effort to ensure the continuity and growth of the wind industry in Gaspésie. Looking ahead, the company is thinking big, and if its past is any indication, the future look very promising.

"Marmen Énergie is proud to have contributed significantly to the development of expertise and a unique know-how in terms of wind tower fabrication in the area, as well as to the training of the specialized skilled workers," said Patrick Pellerin, President of Marmen.

Marmen Énergie is also committed to supporting the regional economy. The realization of the various wind projects has had a direct positive impact on local and regional economies. An employer-of-choice in the Bas-Saint-Laurent region, the company's biggest source of pride remains its employees and its engagement within the community. This is more than a corporate approach, as it reflects the beliefs and values that are also shared by its personnel.
